

COMMA TIP 3

Use a comma to separate a concluding element from the main clause that precedes it.

Single words, phrases, or other clauses can follow a main clause.¹ Here are common concluding elements:

Concluding Element	Definition	Examples
Participle phrase	Verb + ing Verb + ed Irregular form of irregular verb	slurping up the last few drops of a McDonald's chocolate shake, wheezing like a cat with a hairball, bumped from the list, broken by the news, etc.
Appositive	Noun phrase renaming another noun	the best student in Dr. Wright's biology class, my roommate with the worst table manners, the shyest boy in class, etc.
Noun of direct address	Name of the person or being receiving the information	Ned, Mr. President, Mom, etc.
Adverb	Type of modifier, often ends in ly	meanwhile, unfortunately, however, etc.
Subordinate clause	Subordinate conjunction + subject + verb	when the computer began to beep wildly, unless you have heard otherwise, even though I warned him, etc.
Nonessential clause	Who, etc. + verb Who, etc. + subject + verb	who leaped across the counter at McDonald's to get his own ketchup packets, where I saw my first elephant, which Timmy ate with gusto, etc.
Speaker tag	Subject + verb [identifies speaker of a direct quotation]	Laverne shouted, Dr. Nordstrom stated, my mother asserted, etc.

Most concluding elements require a comma to connect them to the end of a main clause. Appositives, nouns of direct address, some adverbs, nonessential clauses, and speaker tags follow this pattern:

MAIN CLAUSE + , + CONCLUDING ELEMENT .

Lisa blew a kiss at Timmy, the shyest boy in class. [Concluding appositive]

Don't we have any more vanilla ice cream, Mom? [Concluding noun of direct address]

¹ A main clause follows this pattern: subject + verb = complete thought. Every sentence must contain at least one main clause.

Jason did forget to buy more ketchup, however. [Concluding adverb]

On my seventh birthday, my family and I spent the day at Busch Gardens, where I saw my first elephant. [Concluding nonessential clause]

"Your sister needs to dump her loser boyfriend," my mother asserted. [Concluding speaker tag]

Usually, subordinate clauses and participle phrases require no punctuation if they are in the concluding position. However, when these two grammatical units create a strong break from the rest of the sentence, use a comma to separate them as well.

Kris drank six cups of strong coffee, even though I warned him that he would have to sit quietly during the three-hour opera. [Concluding subordinate clause]

During the long opera at Bob Carr Auditorium, Kris uncomfortably tolerated the performance, squirming constantly in his seat. [Concluding participle phrase]

Quick Test

Directions: Add commas where they are necessary.

1. Jennifer tolerated the family reunion slapping mosquitoes with a paper plate and drinking iced tea to combat the heat.
2. In a panic, Tony searched the interior of his car. He hoped to find his biology lab work under the front seat or among the clutter in the trunk.
3. At Burger King, James tried to keep pace with Theodore who can eat a Whopper in thirty seconds flat.
4. "Don't bother to ask Mom" warned Sue. "She never extends curfew especially if you tell her that you will be out with a guy."
5. At the West Oaks Mall food court, Aisha winked at Rodney a cute young man in a tight T-shirt.
